Two senior associate promotions at Clarion

Leeds law firm Clarion has promoted two of its team to the position of senior associate.

Dominic Blakeley joined the firm nearly two years ago as an associate in Clarion’s growing dispute resolution practice from an international law firm. He has extensive experience of both pursuing and defending complex and high value multi-jurisdictional claims on behalf of high net worth individuals and companies. His practice is concentrated in the resolution of contractual disputes, particularly in the printing, food and drink manufacture and energy supply sectors, as well as financial mis-selling and partnership/shareholder disputes.

With a wealth of proven commercial law expertise, Fiona Marr joined Clarion as an associate in 2011. She works on a range of commercial matters, including high value outsourcing contracts, IT contracts, supply agreements and more bespoke commercial arrangements whilst also providing general commercial advice.

“As a firm, we are committed to developing our team, enabling talented young lawyers to progress with us and it’s great to see Dominic and Fiona’s technical excellence and hard work being rewarded,” commented Mark Burns, managing partner at Clarion. “Both Dominic and Fiona have consistently made a valuable contribution to the success of the firm by providing an exceptional service to clients.”
